REGULATIONS FOR EXAMINATIONS

The General Board give notice that, on the recommendation of the Faculty Board or other authority concerned, the regulations for certain University examinations have been amended as follows:

Asian and Middle Eastern Studies Tripos, Part II

SUPPLEMENTARY REGULATIONS

(Statutes and Ordinances, p. 279)

With immediate effect

The Supplementary Regulations have been amended for papers available for examination under Regulation 8 so as to amend the title of Paper J.14; insert a descriptor for Paper EAS.3; and to insert an additional three papers X.9, X.10, and X.11 (Papers C.8, C.9, and D.2(c) of the Theological and Religious Studies Tripos) as additional papers available for examination under the Regulation.

PART II

Additional papers available for examination under Regulation 8

J.14. Japanese religion and thought

By removing the current title and text, and replacing it with the following title and text so as to read:

J.14. Classical Japanese texts

This course requires knowledge of classical Japanese.

EAS.3. The Korean wave

By inserting the following text beneath the title of the paper so as to read:

This course examines the contemporary form of East Asian cultural production known as the 'Korean wave.' Since the mid-1990s, South Korean pop culture has enjoyed tremendous popularity throughout Asia. This phenomenon marks an unusual moment in East Asian history as the economic rise of China has not led to Chinese cultural hegemony. By studying the Korean wave, it is possible to come to a better understanding of the dynamics of East Asia in the era of globalization and the possibility of the emergence of a pan-Asian identity. This paper focuses on two of the principal genres of the Korean wave, television dramas and cinema. Through a detailed study of representative works, it will examine issues such as Korean national identity, collective memory, melodrama, the Confucian family in the modern world, and the globalization of media cultures. Social and historical contexts, changes in film production and patterns of consumption, and the development of the Korean film industry on the global stage will be considered, as well as the key aspects of genre and film style.

And by inserting the following papers and descriptors to the list from which papers available under the Regulation may be drawn:

X.9. Judaism II (Paper C8 of the Theological and Religious Studies Tripos)

This paper will consider the life, thought, and worship of medieval and modern Judaism. The Faculty Board of Divinity may from time to time prescribe subjects and texts for special study.

X.10. Islam II (Paper C9 of the Theological and Religious Studies Tripos)

This paper will deal with two advanced topics in Islamic studies specified from time to time by the Faculty Board of Divinity. The Board may also from time to time prescribe texts for special study.

X.11. Judaism and philosophy (Paper D2(c) of the Theological and Religious Studies Tripos)

The Faculty Board of Divinity may from time to time prescribe texts for special study.

Economics Tripos, Part I

(Statutes and Ordinances, p. 298)

With effect from 1 October 2012

The form of examination for Paper 3 has been amended so that the project element is no longer required. Regulation 14 and the Supplementary Regulations have been amended accordingly.

PART I

Regulation 14.

By deleting the final two sentences of the regulation.

SUPPLEMENTARY REGULATIONS

(Statutes and Ordinances, p. 301)

With effect from the same date

PART I

Paper 3. Quantitative methods in economics.

By amending the detail for this paper so as to read:

This paper will cover the application of simple statistical and mathematical techniques to a range of problems in economics. The written examination for the paper will be set in four sections.

Candidates are required to answer questions from all four sections of the written paper: the marks attached to each section, and the number of questions to be answered, will be shown on the question paper. Sections A and B of the paper will comprise a number of questions on mathematical techniques, and the application of these techniques to simple problems in economic theory. Sections C and D of the paper will deal with the manner in which statistics contributes to the study of economic problems and to the discussion of issues of public policy. The questions in these sections will test candidates' ability to perform relatively simple statistical derivations, to analyse problems in applied economics, and their knowledge of statistical sources. Sections A and C will each contain four short questions: students will be required to answer all questions in these sections. Sections B and D will each contain two long questions of which students will be required to answer one. The paper will be of three hours' duration with an additional fifteen-minute reading time prior to the beginning of the examination.

The Faculty Board of Economics have confirmed that no candidate's preparation for the examination in 2013 will be affected by these changes.

REPORTS

Joint Report of the Council and the General Board on the governance arrangements for the Fitzwilliam Museum and Kettle's Yard

The COUNCIL and the GENERAL BOARD beg leave to report to the University as follows:

1. In this Report the central bodies propose that the Fitzwilliam Museum and Kettle's Yard become institutions under the General Board's supervision. The Report is based on the recommendations of an Occasional Committee established by the Council to consider this matter.¹ That Committee was established in light of: developing HEFCE funding policies; the General Board's 2008 Review of the Department of History of Art (and the Board's subsequent review of that Department in 2009 following the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise); and the fact that all of the University's other Museums and Collections are embedded in General Board institutions. That Committee consulted the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate, the Kettle's Yard Committee, the two Directors of the Institutions concerned, the Joint Museums Committee, and various General Board institutions with a particular interest in the Fitzwilliam Museum and Kettle's Yard. The proposal has the support of the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate, the Kettle's Yard Committee, the Joint Museums Committee, and the Faculty Board of Architecture and History of Art.

2. The two institutions concerned are at present under the supervision of the Council. Their local governance is undertaken through the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate (Statutes and Ordinances, p. 640) and the Kettle's Yard Committee (Statutes and Ordinances, p. 142). Each of these makes an annual report to the Council. Within each of their income streams, the Chest provides at present c. £2,887,000 a year to the Fitzwilliam Museum, and £93,000 a year to Kettle's Yard. If this Report's main proposal is accepted, the sums allocated from the Chest to the Council and the General Board for 2012–13 (Reporter, 2011–12, p. 656) will be adjusted as necessary. Individual staff in the Fitzwilliam Museum and Kettle's Yard interact with a number of Faculties and Departments, particularly (but by no means solely) with the Department of History of Art. A number of the Museum's staff act as Directors of Studies in the Colleges. Kettle's Yard has a long standing relationship with the Faculty of Music.

3. The University's Museums and Collections, including the Fitzwilliam and Kettle's Yard, submitted, in 2011, an application for Arts Council funding under the 'Renaissance in the Regions Major Grants' programme. The bid successfully secured £4,509,445 over three years with effect from 2012–13. That bid explicitly grouped together all the University's Museums and Collections; made reference to an inter-museum strategic approach; emphasized the potential arising from a high concentration of Museum resources in Cambridge (which in the UK is second only to London's); and envisaged all the Museums being under a single governance structure led by a Pro-Vice-Chancellor. The recommendations in this Report are consistent with that bid's undertakings.

4. The central bodies consider that there would be significant potential advantages in both institutions coming under the General Board's supervision. The governance change proposed is, in the central bodies' opinion, a necessary condition to facilitate closer and more systemic integration between the two institutions and other General Board institutions, to the long-term benefit of all parties concerned. Both institutions contribute to scholarship, teaching, and research, for which the General Board have responsibility across the rest of the University. The proposal would encourage, within the resources available, more systematic and strategic contributions by the two institutions to the University's teaching programmes and research output, and facilitate greater use of their resources by the University's academic community (both staff and students). It would enable each institution to gain a higher profile within the University, without diluting or undermining their other, outward facing, activities. It would facilitate the building of structured, sustainable relationships with other General Board institutions, and in particular better exploit the synergies between their activities and those of the Department of History of Art. The links between the two institutions and the Department of History of Art would also be strengthened by the Head of that Department becoming a member, ex officio, of the Museum's Syndicate and of Kettle's Yard Committee, and the Director of Kettle's Yard becoming a member of the Faculty Board of Architecture and History of Art (as is already the case for the Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum). There would, however, be a number of other General Board institutions which could also benefit. The central bodies can see benefits in the longer term in attempting to set in place means by which the research potential in the two institutions can be more fully realized in future Research Excellence Frameworks (REFs), as it is already with the embedded Museums and Collections, although immediate REF considerations have not driven the present proposal.

5. The proposal would allow for consistent lines of governance and reporting of all University museums to the General Board. Such governance arrangements for the University's Museums and Collections would allow Cambridge to be better placed to bid for funds in what will continue to be an uncertain funding environment, and would enable issues common to all the Museums and Collections (for example, conservation and storage) to be better addressed. Each of the Directors of the Fitzwilliam Museum and of Kettle's Yard would make annual presentations to the General Board. The proposal is not, however, intended to disturb the valuable responsibilities discharged by the Museum's Syndicate and the Kettle's Yard Committee, both of which make very important contributions, not least through their external members, to the health of these institutions. Nor would the proposal disturb arrangements applying in other Museums and Collections which are already embedded in General Board institutions.

6. It is not considered appropriate for either of the two institutions to be assigned to a particular School. Their activities extend, or could extend, across more than one School; and, in the case of the Museum, its size is such that it would distort the strategy and operation of any one School. The two institutions would continue to be scrutinized separately in the annual Planning Round.

7. If this Report's main recommendation is accepted, it follows that the current Joint Museums Committee would become a Committee responsible to the General Board (rather than, as now, to both the Council and the General Board). That Committee is now chaired by a Pro-Vice-Chancellor. This should continue to be the case, to ensure proper consideration centrally of the Museums' needs and resources, and to ensure sufficient knowledge of their activities at meetings of the General Board and relevant senior committees. The General Board envisage that whilst, as now, the (Joint) Museums Committee would continue to include representatives of all the Museums and Collections, it would also include other members without particular connections to any Museum or Collection. The General Board would approve terms of reference for the Committee after consultation with the current Joint Committee as well as the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate, the Kettle's Yard Committee, and the relevant Councils of the Schools. The Board, at this stage, envisage that these terms of reference would include responsibility for an inter-museum strategy, for activities applicable to all Museums and Collections, and for preparing and continued oversight of University-wide funding bids in relation to the Museums. The Minutes of the Committee's meetings would continue to be considered by the General Board.

8. The Council and the General Board also concur with a recommendation by the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate that the frequency of its meetings be reduced to at least four meetings each year.

9. The Council and the General Board recommend:

I. That the Fitzwilliam Museum and Kettle's Yard become institutions under the General Board's supervision with effect from 1 August 2012.

II. That, if Recommendation I is approved, the following regulations be inserted or amended as indicated:

Report of the General Board on the establishment of an MRC Research Professorship of Mitochondrial Medicine

The GENERAL BOARD beg leave to report to the University as follows:

1. In their Report on certain fixed-term Professorships and Readerships and future arrangements for awarding the title of Honorary Professor or Reader (Reporter, 2000–01, p. 814), the Board, in accordance with policy and procedure outlined in paragraph 6 of the Notice on appointments to unestablished posts at the level of Professor or Reader (Reporter, 2000–01, p. 552), proposed, inter alia, the establishment of a number of fixed-term Professorships and Readerships, in place of unestablished Research Professorships and Readerships. The Board, in their Notice, also stated their intention to recommend the establishment of Professorships on future occasions when an individual had been successful in a prestigious external competition, for example, Royal Society and MRC Research Professorships. In a further Report, dated 22 January 2003 (Reporter, 2002–03, p. 519), the Board

3. The General Board recommend:

That an MRC Research Professorship of Mitochondrial Medicine be established from 15 November 2012 for the tenure of Dr Massimo Zeviani, placed in Schedule B of the Statutes, and assigned to the Faculty of Clinical Medicine.

Report of the General Board on the constitution of a Department of Psychology

The GENERAL BOARD beg leave to report to the University as follows:

1. In this Report, the General Board propose the establishment of a single Department of Psychology through the merger of the Division of Social and Developmental Psychology, and the Centre for Family Research, with the Department of Experimental Psychology. The merger was a recommendation of the General Board Review of the Social Sciences (Reporter, 2009–10, p. 468), and has now been brought forward by the Faculty Boards concerned.

2. At present, the Department of Experimental Psychology is within the School of the Biological Sciences, while the Division of Social and Developmental Psychology and the Centre for Family Research are part of the Department of Social Sciences in the School of the Humanities and Social Sciences.

3. The Faculty Boards of Biology and of Human, Social, and Political Science (HSPS) have put forward the case for this merger on the following grounds:

- to consolidate the re-alignment of teaching responsibilities;
- to provide a strong single entity representing Psychology for the Research Excellence Framework submission to the Psychology, Psychiatry, and Neuroscience Unit of Assessment;
- to enable new research areas to be developed; and
- to provide a single department for high-quality undergraduates who wish to read Psychology, and for whom the present admissions routes can be confusing.

Psychology teaching and research would thus be proposed the establishment of Professorships for the holders of Wellcome Trust Principal Research Fellowships.

2. The Board have now considered a proposal for the establishment of an MRC Research Professorship of Mitochondrial Medicine for Dr Massimo Zeviani, currently Director of the Unit of Molecular Neurogenetics, Istituto Neurologico Carlo Besta, Milan. The Professorship is intended to be held in association with the honorary Directorship of the Medical Research Council's Mitochondrial Biology Unit in Cambridge. The award from the MRC supporting the Professorship is for an initial period of ten years from the date of appointment, and is expected to be renewed for so long as Dr Zeviani remains honorary Director of the Unit. The Faculty Board of Clinical Medicine have agreed to meet the costs of the Professorship from the expiry of the MRC award, for the remainder of Dr Zeviani's tenure should that be necessary.

unified in Cambridge in a common Department of Psychology, based within the School of the Biological Sciences. The proposal has been endorsed by the Councils of the Schools of the Biological Sciences and of the Humanities and Social Sciences.

4. The benefits of the proposal were identified in the General Board's Review of the Social Sciences. A single Department of Psychology will provide a higher and more coherent public profile for Cambridge Psychology. It will encompass a wider range of the discipline's strands (a characteristic shared by the UK's strongest psychology departments), thereby providing a richer research environment. It will strengthen the interaction, increasingly found across the social sciences, between social processes and those studied through the natural sciences. It will provide more coherent and efficient teaching. So far as research is concerned, a single Department should facilitate the development of new research synergies. There should be REF advantages in being able to demonstrate a fully integrated submission covering a broad spectrum of specialisms in Psychology, and in benefiting from the repositioning of Psychology within the Biological (rather than Social) Sciences in the next REF.

5. The Department of Psychology will continue to contribute to the following interdepartmental courses within the Medical and Veterinary Sciences (MVST), Natural Sciences (NST), and Politics, Psychology, and Sociology (PPS) Triposes:

- NST, Part IA, Evolution and Behaviour;
- NST, Part IA, Elementary Mathematics for Biology;

MVST, Part IB, Neurobiology and Human Behaviour;
 NST, Part IB, Neurobiology;
 PPS, Part IIA, Psychology and Sociology;
 NST, Part II, Neuroscience, Psychology, and Physiology; and PPS, Part IIB, Psychology and Sociology.

The Department will take full responsibility for teaching the following:

PPS, Part I, Psychology;
 NST, Part IB, Experimental Psychology;
 PPS, Part IIA, Psychology;
 NST, Part II, Psychology; and PPS, Part IIB, Psychology.

The General Board's proposals for the teaching of Psychology within the Psychology and Behavioural Sciences Tripos (PBST) have strengthened the case for this merger. The new PBST will be overseen by a Management Committee, which will report to the Faculty Board of Biology, with representation from the Faculty of HSPS. In due course, as other subjects become involved in the new Tripos, representatives from other Faculties will be added to the Management Committee. Once operational, the PBST will subsume teaching in Psychology as described in the General Board's previous Report on teaching in Psychology (Reporter, 2010–11, p. 958).

The Department of Psychology will be responsible for the teaching associated with the M.Phil. in Social and Developmental Psychology. It will also become responsible for the former Division of Social and Developmental Psychology's contribution to the ESRC Doctoral Training Centre, including teaching on the Social Sciences Research Methods Centre teaching programme. The Department will be responsible for the Department of Experimental Psychology's contribution to the MRC Doctoral Training Award, and to the BBSRC Doctoral Training Partnership. Master's and Doctoral Students registered before August 2012 will by default continue to be managed by the Degree Committee with which they are currently registered (i.e. either the Degree Committee for the Faculty of Biology or that for the Faculty of HSPS), but they may transfer if it is agreed to be in their best interests. Students beginning their graduate studies in Psychology after August 2012 will be the responsibility of the Degree Committee for the Faculty of Biology.

6. The General Board intend to appoint the current Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology as Head of the new Department.

7. The staff of Experimental Psychology are based in a number of buildings, mainly located on the Downing Site, but also at the Innes Centre on the West Cambridge Site, the Herchel Smith building on the Forvie Site, and the sub-Department of Animal Behaviour at Madingley. The staff in the Division of Social and Developmental Psychology and those in the Centre for Family Research are mainly based in the Old Cavendish Laboratory in Free School Lane, but also in the Mond Building on the New Museums Site. The new Department could not be housed on a single site at present, but in the longer term there should be opportunities for co-locating those with similar research interests, i.e. while it will not be possible to co-locate staff in each of the new Departments of Psychology and of Sociology immediately, this should be achieved as soon as possible.

8. Proposals for the reassignment of existing Professorships and Readerships to the new Department are set out in Recommendation II. Subject to the approval of this Report, the General Board would reassign other offices, with the concurrence of the present holders, to the new Department.

9. Two support staff whose duties primarily concern the Division of Social and Developmental Psychology, and all support staff of the Department of Experimental Psychology, will be assigned to the new Department.

Other support staff currently shared by the Division of Social and Developmental Psychology with the Division of Sociology, and the Department of Politics and International Studies will remain with the Faculty of Human, Social, and Political Science. A small number of these staff, e.g. for IT support, will continue to have duties in the new Department of Psychology for a transitional period, as agreed between the two Schools, but this will be subject to annual review. Research Staff of the Division of Social and Developmental Psychology will also transfer to the new Department. A transfer of funds has been agreed between the Schools. Overall the merger is expected to be financially cost neutral.

Staff and trade unions are being consulted and kept informed of progress. There will be no compulsory job losses as a direct consequence of this merger.

10. The General Board consider that the establishment of a new Department of Psychology would significantly simplify undergraduate admissions for high quality candidates intending to read Psychology, further promote excellence in teaching quality, strengthen the Psychology submission to the REF, and facilitate significant developments in research. In the longer term the merger would provide a strategic opportunity to rationalize and improve the accommodation and facilities for teaching and research in the discipline. The General Board have, accordingly, accepted the proposals and commend them to the University for approval.

REPORT OF DISCUSSION

Tuesday, 12 June 2012

A Discussion was held in the Council Room. Pro-Vice-Chancellor Dr Jennifer Barnes was presiding, with the Registrar's Deputy, the Senior Proctor, a Deputy Proctor, and five other persons present.

The following Reports were discussed:

Report of the Council, dated 28 May 2012, on the financial position and budget of the University, recommending allocations from the Chest for 2012–13 (Reporter, 2011–12, p. 652).

Professor S. J. YOUNG (Senior Pro-Vice-Chancellor, Planning and Resources):

Deputy Vice-Chancellor, this will be my third Budget Report as PVC for Planning and Resources, and the third year in succession recommending a planned deficit on the Chest. This is consistent with the strategy set out in 2010 designed to steer a course through the economic down-turn which strikes an appropriate balance between continuing to fund properly our academic mission, and the need for financial prudence.

So far, our financial predictions have been reasonably accurate, and we remain on track. Indeed, the prospects appear to be improving slightly. As the new undergraduate fee rolls in, net funding for teaching will return to levels comparable with those enjoyed in 2008–09. Our investment income is holding up despite constant market turmoil, and Cambridge Assessment continues to do well. The cumulative Chest deficit predicted for the period 2009–10 to 2015–16 in the 2011 Budget Report is now reduced from £36m to £23m, with a return to surplus expected one year ahead of schedule in 2014–15.

The baseline increase in allocations for 2012–13 was 1%, and I expect this modest level of annual increase to be maintained until we return to surplus. Lest this appear too austere, it is worth noting that unspent chest allocations remain in Schools to be spent in future years. These Chest Reserves have been increasing steadily over the last few years, and now total £36m across the six Schools. This is a sizeable war chest which, when added to the £6m of additional money provided to support the REF, should provide Schools with the scope needed to make any necessary near-term strategic investments.

A comparison of the forecast Capital Fund income and expenditure with that shown last year reveals a significant increase in spend, and the fund itself moving into deficit. Again this is part of our strategic planning. Council has agreed that the Capital Fund may move into a deficit of up to £100m, provided that the full cost of servicing that internal loan is met by the fund itself. Given the substantial cuts in government support for capital projects, this will be essential if our plans to renew key infrastructure are to proceed. In particular, the redevelopment of the New Museums site is now well underway. With the moves to West Cambridge of the Departments of Materials Science and Metallurgy, and Chemical Engineering and Biotechnology now agreed, it is time to consider in detail the future of this site. To this end, a New Museums Site project board has been established, and a new master plan will be developed over the coming year.

Elsewhere, developments on the Biomedical Campus continue apace: a new Data Centre will be built on West Cambridge, Astrophysics will extend the Kavli Institute, and Engineering will build an extension at its main Scroope Terrace site. Looking further to the future, the Cavendish Laboratory and the Downing Site are both in need of significant attention. The pressure on renewing our estate will not diminish, and neither therefore will the demand for funding to support it.

A review of Cambridge University Development Office and Cambridge in America has been completed to advise on the organizations, structures, and resources required for the next campaign. Income from donations is an increasingly essential component of our recurrent and capital funding. If we are to develop these income streams, we will need to develop a clear strategy for the next campaign, and be prepared to invest in the resources needed to deliver it.

Last year I commented on the need to focus our attention on research in order to regain our leading market share and ensure we obtain the best possible REF outcome. Under the guidance of the PVC for Research, considerable progress has been made. The Research Office has been restructured, REF infrastructure is in place, and a number of strategic themes and initiatives have been established. However, the shift to charity and EU funding, and the increasing level of claw-back via the RCUK Efficiency Factor have ensured that recovery of the indirect costs of our research remains below target. If our expanding research base is to remain sustainable, we must seek to increase indirect cost recovery in all ways possible, for example, by maximizing charging for PI time, ensuring that Chest-funded support staff are charged to grants, and increasing sponsorship by those prepared to pay the full cost of research, especially industry.

There is no doubt that we continue to live in uncertain times, and that there is no shortage of downside risks. Exposure to volatile investment markets, further cuts in government spending, under-performance of Cambridge Assessment, increasing pension liabilities, and a poor REF performance are obvious examples. Nevertheless, Cambridge has a strong balance sheet, and provided that Schools and Institutions continue to maintain careful control over expenditure, I remain confident that our financial strategy is sound. I therefore commend this Budget Report to the Regent House.

Finally, I would like to express my thanks once again to the many staff of the UAS who have worked hard to produce the data and projections that inform this Report.

Report of the General Board, dated 23 May 2012, on Senior Academic Promotions (Reporter, 2011–12, p. 673).

No remarks were made on this Report.
